W Hey Alex. How's it going?

M OK. I just finished math class. Man, I hate math!

W Why? It's easy!

M Yeah, right

W I've got a secret that helps me in math class Wanna know what it is?

M OK. But it probably won't help me.

W Listen and try it. Math is too abstract, right? Well, try to make it real for yourself. My secret is I think about numbers in math as if they were money.

M Huh?

W Yeah. I have a hard time picturing numbers. But if I see the numbers as dollars and cents then I can see them clearly in my head.

M Really?!

W Yeah. For example, if the teacher says "What is 853 minus 727". I think of eight dollars and fifty-three cents minus seven dollars and twenty-seven cents. The answer is one dollar and 26 cents one twenty-six. It's easy!

M Hey that's awesome! I'll try it tomorrow. Thanks.

W No problem. See you at the basketball game tonight.

M See you.

W I really like art! Especially paintings.

M Really? Do you have a favorite one?

W Yes, Mona Lisa by Leonardo da Vinci.

M What do you like about it?

W Her smile. If you look closely, it seems she's not smiling at all. Look again, she's smiling! So many artists try to copy that smile.

M It must be hard to paint something so beautiful.

W Did you ever notice that she doesn't have any eyebrows?

M Really? No! I never noticed, I wonder why?

W Girls in that time shaved their eyebrows. I just read it in our art history textbook.

M Hey! That's cool. Nowadays, she'd have an eyebrow ring!

W I'm still confused about the lecture today on blood types.

M OK. What questions do you have?

W Well first the way we classify blood types. We use the letters A, B, and O, right?

M That's right. There are four different types of blood: A, B, AB, and O. Each person on Earth has one of these types.

W And...where do we get our blood types?

M They come from both our father and mother. Your blood type could be the same as one of your parents, or completely different.

W But everyone's blood is red!

M Yes, it all looks the same, but it's dangerous to mix two different blood types together. If you get hurt and need blood, you have to make sure the new blood is the same type as yours. If it's not, you might die.

W Tests make me nervous. What can I do?
M Good question. It's natural to be a little nervous before a test. The important thing is: don't panic. You've studied hard for this test. You can pass it. Be confident! Relax! Now, you’re more likely to be relaxed if you are well prepared. Here are some tips. First, before you leave home, check to make sure you have everything you need. You should have your admission ticket. This was mailed to you last week. You should have two number-two pencils and a good eraser. You should have identification your student ID card, a driver's license, or a passport. If you're taking the math portion of the test, you should have a calculator. Second, know what you can't bring to the test. You cannot bring a watch with a loud alarm. You cannot bring any food or drink. You cannot bring extra paper to write on. You cannot bring any books, notes, or dictionaries. You cannot bring compasses rulers, protractors, or other aids - except for the calculator. You cannot bring colored pens, pencils, or highlighters. You cannot bring cell phones or pagers. You cannot bring any portable tape recorders,. walkmans, or headphones. Questions?

W Um...what if I uh, have to go to the bathroom during the test?

W Hi there. On last week's programme, we interviewed the man behind the idea of the International camps so I thought that this week you'd be interested to hear more about one of the camps which will be held later this year over to you Michael.

M Thank you. Yes, the Camp is open to everyone between the ages of 18 to 23. You don't have to be a student. You don't even have to be employed but you must be able to speak one foreign language in addition to your mother tongue.

W OK. And what about accommodation?

M Well, the International Camp organisers supply tents which sleep up to four people. But you are unlikely to know the people who you'll be sharing a tent with. The nationalities are mixed so you'll be sharing with people who may not even speak your language!

W Sounds interesting. Who does the cooking at the Camp?

M Everybody is expected to help with the running of the Camp. That means helping to prepare food, keeping the camp site clean and tidy, and so on. The Camp organisers are looking for people who can get along with others whatever happens.

W And is there anything you need to take?

M Well as I've said, tents are provided but you'll need to bring your own pillow, knife, fork and spoon. If you get chosen, you're also asked to bring along photographs, postcards, anything that shows some of the traditions and customs of your own country. Everything goes into an exhibition at the start of the Camp together with a huge map of the world showing the different countries people come from.

W And is there any entertainment?

M Yes, there is. Everyone helps to provide the Camp entertainment. You are expected to sing, dance or play something musical. It doesn't matter how good or bad you are. There is a space on the form to write down what you can do.

W Sounds great fun. And what does it all cost?

M Well, you have to find your own way to the Camp so it's up to you whether you fly, cycle, walk, hitch-hike or whatever. The charge for a week's Camp is 300 dollars. But you'll have to change that into your own currency to get a better idea of the cost. You have to pay the full cost before you arrive. But you can pay in any currency you want or you can use a credit card if you have one. Right. Now for the phone number to ring ...

W In today's programme. David Green has come along to tell us all about Waterside Shopping Centre near Northport. Good morning, David.

M Good morning. Well, I visited Waterside last week and I think it has something for everyone and I would recommend it for a day out. It's taken three years to build and finally opened three weeks ago, two months later than planned. Firstly, getting there; there are organized coach trips from most towns in the area but they leave early and come home very late, so I drove. There are 12,000 free parking spaces, so parking is no problem. You can also get there by train, but the station is 15 minutes from Waterside by bus and the buses are really crowded so you sometimes have a long wait.

W And what about opening times?

M Well, one thing to remember is that the shops don't open till 10.00 in the morning except on Saturday when they open at 9.00. So don't get there too early on a weekday. They close at 8 o'clock every day except Friday when they're open until 9 pm.

W Can you tell us some more about the facilities at the shopping centre?

M Yes, it's arranged on three levels. You'll find all your favourites here. In fact, if you want to buy a pair of shoes there are 15 different shops to choose from on levels one and two. When you run out of money there are seven different banks but collect your money before you get to the third level as there aren't any banks up there. On that level, however, there are several restaurants as well as a cinema with seven screens. And don't get lost like I did, go to the information desk on the first level and get a map.

W What else can you do at Waterside?

M Before you go back to your car or the bus and in fact it might be better to do this before you go shopping and have too much to carry go and see the lake. Take a walk or have a go at fishing, sailing or wind surfing if you have time. Or you can rest your tired feet and watch the birds and ducks, but you are asked not to feed them.

W Was there anything you didn't like about the shopping centre?

M Oh. Well, although I had a good day, I would complain about one thing but not the usual thing the service in the shops was good and I had an excellent lunch in a cafe. No, the silly thing was that everywhere was quite clean but people were dropping their sweet papers and empty drink cans on the ground because there wasn't anywhere else to throw them. Apart from that I would recommend it.

W And so that's all for today's programme ...

2. One thing to remember is that the shops don't open till 10.00 in the morning except on Saturday when they open at 9.00. (C, D) So don't get there too early on a weekday. They close at 8 o'clock every day except Friday when they're open until 9 pm. (A, B)
   (Một điều cần phải nhớ là các cửa hàng sẽ mở cửa vào lúc 10 giờ sáng, ngoại trừ vào thứ bảy, của hành sẽ mở cửa vào lúc 9 giờ. (C, D) Vậy nên đừng đến đó quá sớm vào những ngày trong tuần. Các cửa hàng sẽ đóng cửa vào lúc 8 giờ tối mỗi ngày, ngoại trừ vào thứ sáu, các cửa hàng sẽ mở cửa cho đến 9 giờ tối.) (A, B)
3. Take a walk or have a go at fishing, sailing or wind surfing if you have time. (C, D) Or you can rest your tired feet and watch the birds and ducks, but you are asked not to feed them. (A, B) (Hãy đi bộ hoặc đi câu cá, đi du thuyền hoặc đi lướt sóng nếu bạn có thời gian. (C, D)Hoặc bạn cũng có thể nghỉ ngơi và ngắm chim bay vịt bơi, nhưng bạn không được cho chúng ăn.(A)
4. I would complain about one thing, but not the usual thing - the service in the shops was good (C) and I had an excellent lunch in a café (B). No, the silly thing was that everywhere was quite clean but people were dropping their sweet papers and empty drink cans on the ground because there wasn't anywhere else to throw them (A).
   (Tôi muốn phàn nàn về một thứ. Thật ra dịch vụ trong cửa hàng khá tốt (C). Bên cạnh đó, tôi cũng có một bữa trưa rất ngon trong một quán cà phê (B). Điều mà tôi muốn phàn nàn là mọi nơi đều khá sạch, tuy nhiên người ta thường quăng vỏ kẹo và lon nước trên sàn bởi vì không có chỗ nào để vứt chúng cả. (A)

M And today, I'm talking to Angela Morgan. Angela, what made you decide to fly round the world in a helicopter?

W People often ask me why I decided to do it but I'm surprised they don't ask 'Why did you wait so long?' because I'm 57 now! I'm sorry I didn't do it years ago, because it was such a wonderful experience. But the main purpose for going was to collect £500,000 for sick children by getting different companies to pay us money for each kilometre that we flew.

M And now everyone calls you the flying grandmother!

W Yes, the thing about growing older is that you don't feel any different inside so you have to do as much as you can while you can. I'm healthy, and my own children are grown up, so I was free to go.

M And what about preparing for the trip?

W Well, it took five months to plan. I was going to go with my husband but he couldn't take time off work. Instead, I made the trip with my flying teacher who became a great friend while she was teaching me to fly three years ago. I passed my flying test after two weeks; found it quite easy.

M And what was the trip like?

W It was really exciting flying over so many different countries. The only thing was that we weren't able to spend much time sightseeing because we only stopped to get water and to camp. We took very little with us but we did have tents and cooking things to use at night. We had to spend two days in Thailand because of an engine problem but that was the longest we spent anywhere. Fortunately nothing else went wrong, so we just kept on going after that.

M What did you enjoy most about the trip?

W The most wonderful thing about flying was seeing the differences in the countryside as we flew across 26 countries in 97 days. We flew over oceans and close to mountains; sometimes it was quite frightening, but we didn't travel when it was dark. We spent several nights camping in the desert and the sky was just full of stars. I made a video of the trip; you'll see it in a minute.

M Was there anything that you missed while you were away?

W Well, to my surprise I didn't miss going to work or going out to restaurants or films. The most difficult thing was sitting still all the time. I normally play tennis and swim several times a week, so I started to feel very unfit. I missed hot water and proper showers sometimes too, but not as much as I thought I would!

M Britta, you're English, but you live in Berlin. Have you lived here for a long time?

W Well, I was born in England, but I've lived in Germany for the past twenty years. I arrived in Berlin about four years ago. Before that, I lived in Bonn for six years, but I work as a journalist and when the newspaper moved to Berlin, I moved with them.

M Were you pleased to come to Berlin?

W Yes, I was. I was looking forward to being in a big city like Berlin. Bonn was quite a lot smaller, so I love the busy atmosphere and all the cultural entertainments here museums, theatres and so on. The only thing I don't like is the traffic it's a bit noisy in the mornings. It wakes me up about 6.30, but most days I have to get up early anyway!

M Where do you live in Berlin?

W I have a flat in the old part of the city. It's right in the centre and it's not too expensive. It costs me about £500 a month. My street is becoming very popular. There are lots of new art galleries, and small cafés and friendly restaurants everywhere. Eating out in Berlin is fun, and it's cheap, so it's something I do quite often.

M How do you find transport in Berlin?

W Well, the transport system here is very good, so I have a tram and bus ticket but in fact, most of the time I cycle. Travel here is much cheaper than in other countries I know perhaps that's why people don't walk very much!

M What do you like to do in Berlin at the weekends?

W Well, I like art, so sometimes I go to one of the galleries. I have a nephew called Philippe. He's only three but he likes coming with me. He likes the café best, I think. And it's a change from going to the park that's something he does very often. He usually comes out with me while his parents go shopping.

M Do you miss your friends and family in England?

W work colleagues socially but I've got some very good friends who live in the same street as me. I enjoy meeting people, and I find Berlin is a very friendly city.

M Thank you for talking to us, Britta.

M Rachel, tell us how your shows for children started. You studied art at college, didn't you?

W That's right. But I gave up my career as an artist when my twin daughters were born. Painting took up too much time when I was looking after them. I thought about teaching art classes part-time, but instead I started making dolls for my daughters. I love acting, so I often invented little plays for the dolls, doing the voices myself.

M And when did you start doing shows for other people?

W When our daughters were five, my husband suggested using the dolls to entertain the children at their birthday party. I wrote a little show and he built a dolls' theatre. My daughters and their friends loved it. As a result, other parents asked me to come and do the show at their children's parties. That's how it all began.

M It must be a lot of work for you?

W Yes. I love making the dolls, but I decided that I needed someone to help me with the shows. Luckily my neighbour, Lena, was keen to perform with me Her husband records the music to go with the shows. It would be impossible to do everything on my own.

M Have you ever had any problems?

W Only once. I did a show for a group of three-year-olds, and I'd written a story about a lion. Unfortunately, the children were really afraid of the lion and started crying. I was worried the parents might complain but luckily they were all able to laugh about it afterwards.

M And what did you learn from that?

W The experience taught me that I had to find out beforehand just what children enjoy. Like me, Lena has two daughters, so whenever we've invented a new story we show it to our four girls first. They always tell us exactly what they think of it. And sometimes I take new dolls to the local primary school to check that children like them.

M And the shows continue to be successful?

W They do. I have a range of different shows for five to nine-year-olds. In fact, the shows have become so successful I could do one every day, but I don't want to do that. The reason the shows have become popular, I think, is because I love every minute of every show and so other people love them too. I certainly didn't realise when I organised that birthday party for my daughters all those years ago that it would change my life so much!

M And today in the studio we have a familiar face on television, Angela Bond the news reporter. Angela, your job has taken you all over the world, hasn't it?

W Yes. I've reported from a number of countries in Asia and I've just returned from the United States. I must say, it's good to be able to unpack my suitcase now that the job has brought me to Britain for at least six months.

M Is the travelling what you enjoy about the job?

W It's certainly interesting, but it can be annoying never knowing where I'm going to be next week! For me, the really exciting thing is being somewhere when a big news story is taking place and seeing it develop. Sometimes that can be quite dangerous, but all jobs have their disadvantages! And travelling gives me the chance to collect souvenirs.

M What kind of things?

W Mostly things for my flat. I'm mad about anything Chinese and so when I was in Hong Kong, I got a really nice table and some chairs and in Turkey I spend a lot of money on carpets. Then I've got pictures and other bits of art from Thailand and India. The flat's getting a bit crowded!

M It sounds colourful! Do you have a regular working day?

W Not really. At the moment, I'm one of the team that reads the evening news so sometimes I'm on at six thirty, and sometimes at ten o'clock. But that's at the end of the day. It all starts in the morning at eight thirty when I phone the office to see what has happened and what they want me to go and report on.

M So you don't have much time for a social life?

W It's better now I'm in London and can see my boyfriend more often. My sister introduced us. He came round for dinner when I was staying with her a year ago. We have a lot in common. He's a lawyer and I studied law at university. Also we've found that we lived in Hong Kong at the same time, although we never met.

M What do you like to do in your free time?

W Well, cooking is something new I'm trying because I can't do it when I'm travelling. But I'm not very good at it yet so I find it a bit stressful. One of the best things I've bought recently was a boat and when I want to feel calm and peaceful I go for a sail on the river. It never fails!

M Angela - thanks.

W Oh, what a wonderful view! I'm here with Jack Williams, who's telling me about his home town of Swanton.

M Yes, the top of this hill is the best place to see the area. Swanton is on the coast you can see the harbour from here but in fact the town is built along the river Dean. This river comes from a lake in the mountains, over there in the distance then flows down to the flat land below us where the town is built.

W What do you most like about living here?

M About Swanton? Oh, it's an important industrial town and a port so there's lots of activity. And there's a forest behind the town with interesting wildlife. But the most exciting thing for me is the mountains. I go climbing whenever I get the chance.

W What about entertainment?

M There's plenty of entertainment. A big centre was built last year to encourage the arts - very modern. It's got a cinema, a theatre and an art gallery. And there's football. The local team hasn't done so well lately. A few years ago we nearly won the Cup. And our area is famous for music not in Swanton itself but there's a well-known music festival in the next town.

W But there are problems with the environment.

M We're working on that. The river was a great place for fish but the water got so polluted by the factories that most of the fish disappeared. Well, we've cleaned the river up now, and the fish are starting to come back. But I'm unhappy about Swanton woods. The trees are quite healthy but if you look, there are no birds there, and that's because pollution has reduced the number of insects.

W Swanton's growing fast. Are you pleased about the way it's changed?

M You've got to move with the times. It was completely different when I was a boy. In those days everybody worked in the factories, and the families all knew each other. Maybe it was a little boring. Today there are hundreds of different companies and so many new houses that some people don't even know their neighbours. There are disadvantages, but it's impossible to be bored with all the things going on.

W And what about Swanton's future?

M Education is important to us. We have a fine university which specialises in advanced technology. And a huge shopping centre, just built, which is bringing in double the number of visitors - good news for us. And last year we improved our airport, so more planes can come in.

Cây cối khá xanh tươi, nhưng nếu nhìn kỹ, bạn sẽ thấy ở đó không có chim chóc (B). Lý do là vì ô nhiễm môi trường đã khiến số lượng chim chóc giảm đi.)

Có thể hồi đó hơi nhàm chán một chút. Còn ngày nay, có hàng trăm công ty khác nhau, vì vậy, nhiều gia đình còn không biết hàng xóm của mình là ai. Điều này đem lại nhiều mặt tiêu cực, nhưng nếu cứ buồn chán với những điều đang diễn ra thì cũng không giải quyết được vấn đề gì.)

M My guest today is the star of the London Ballet Company, twenty-two-year-old Elena Karpov. Elena you were born in Bulgaria. Did you always want to be a dancer?

W Well, I was a very lively little girl, so at the age of seven my mother sent me to gymnastics classes. When I was nine, I went on to ballet lessons and from that moment I knew that I wanted to spend my life dancing. Two years later, when I was eleven, I won a place at the New York Ballet School.

M So you had to move to the United States. Did you miss your family?

W Oh yes. At first it was difficult being away from home and not knowing a lot of English. But it taught me how to look after myself and not to depend on others. There were other Bulgarian students there and we actually found it quite easy to learn enough English to take part in the lessons with the other students.

M Tell us about your latest role with the London Ballet Company.

W I'm going to dance the part of Cinderella. It's a story about a poor girl who marries a handsome prince. My parents used to read it to me when I was little. I'd never seen the ballet before, but I already knew the music really well. I'm sure children will love the ballet.

M What do you do when you're not practising or performing?

W Before I joined this company I spent two weeks going round London as a tourist. I don't have time for sightseeing now, but I love trying on the latest fashions with my friends. I'm always buying new jeans and trainers! I'm not too keen on discos and nightclubs I dance enough during the day!

M You must have lots of fans.

W Quite a few! They always ask for a photograph of me, but unfortunately I don't have many to give away. I sometimes sign their programmes instead and if I can I give them one of the flowers I've received from the audience. They always ask for tickets, but of course that's not possible.

M What's been the best thing that's happened in your career so far?

W Well, I've been a guest dancer with ballet companies in Moscow and Vienna and I appeared twice on television in Bulgaria and met the president! I shall never forget that! But the most satisfying thing for me is that I'm paid for doing what I really enjoy - dancing!

M Elena, thank you for talking to us.

W Thank you.

W Today I'm with Robin Marshall, who has just written a book about travelling in Argentina. Robin, tell us about yourself...

M Well, I've travelled to South America a lot for my work and I know Argentina well now. So well that I could be a tour guide if I wanted! I speak fluent Spanish, so I don't need anyone to translate for me. My job involves travelling around selling products for my company. I meet a lot of people doing that, and I wanted to share those experiences with others, so I decided to try writing.

W So, tell us about your last visit to Argentina. What was the weather like?

M Well, it was winter there, so mornings were cold, but I'd expected that. Every day they said on the radio that it would be sunny later and sure enough, it was! I wanted to go sightseeing, and the weather was perfect for that.

W And where did you go when you went sightseeing?

M Well, I went to a wonderful market that sold everything from modern art to old recordings of traditional music, which I collect. I came home with a beautiful painting of the area I also saw a wonderful antique chair, but unfortunately it was too big to bring back.

W Now, Argentina is famous for its dancing. Did you see any performances during your trip?

M I did, yes. It reminded me of when I used to attend dance classes. I enjoyed then although I was never very good. I'm sure my teacher was pleased when I said I wasn't going to continue! But these dancers made it look so easy that at that moment I felt like joining in and dancing with them.

W It sounds wonderful! And what else did you do?

M Well, I went to a small village on the coast. I took the bus there, and got a room in a small hotel. The hotel owner was very friendly. He took me down the river in his boat. It was very beautiful - you could see the forest in the distance.

W Do you have a favourite place in Argentina?

M Definitely. It's a mountain near Buenos Aires. It's famous for its spectacular scenery. But when I went there it was very misty and the sun was just rising. You couldn't see much. there were no birds or animals about It was totally quiet, and I loved that. I shall go back one day.

W We look forward to reading your book. Thank you, Robin.

M Thank you.

Tôi nói trôi chảy tiếng Tây Ban Nha nên tôi không cần ai làm phiên dịch cho tôi. W Harry Park, you run a travel company which organizes adventure holidays in some difficult places? How did you first become interested in Adventure travel?

M Well, my father worked in an insurance company once he had a family but before that he'd spent several years traveling the world and he never stopped telling us about it. His stories were much more exciting than the books I read and they make me want to travel and have adventures of my own.

W And what made you decide to start an adventure travel company?

M Well, when I was in my twenties, I traveled a lot in different countries I went exploring and climbing in mountains and deserts. I wanted to show other people how wonderful these things were. The business has been very successful but when I started it I didn't know if I'd make any money.

W Your company is called Far and wide. How did you choose the name?

M Well, I just called it Park Travel at first. But everyone thought that was terribly boring! My wife kept suggesting different things but in the end it was a customer who gave me the idea. Far and wide is also the title of a book that a friend wrote so it reminds me of him too

W Great... The places you visit are usually very unspoilt, Harry. Some people think it's not a good idea to take tourists there. What would you say to them?

M Well, most of the places we visit have no inhabitants, so we aren't going to spoil people's way of life or bring in things like television and fridges! And I make sure that we always take care of the environment. We are careful not to cause pollution, so we take all our rubbish away.

W Some of the things you do are also dangerous. Do you enjoy danger?

M Well, it's not a question of enjoying it. It's just that you can't do what I do without thinking about the possible dangers. I'm never frightened though. If I'm taking a group up a mountain or something like that. I just concentrate on what I have to do and get on with it.

W You've been to some fascinating places, Harry. What's your favourite?

M It's in India. You travel along a river through spectacular scenery and up into the mountains in Madhya Pradesh. In the valley on the other side there's a wonderful old castle. It's magical. The mountains hide it, so few people know it's there ...

W Thanks for talking to us, Harry ...

M Thank you.

M Now Linda, let's talk about your first job.

W Well, I was an assistant in an expensive cake shop in the small town where I lived. It was my last year at school, before I went to college. I wanted to earn extra money for myself because I come from a family of seven and my parents couldn't afford to give us much pocket money.

M Did you like your first boss?

W He was always polite, never shouted at us, even when we dropped thing and that was good for a young girl like me who wasn't very confident. He knew everything about the business. I had no proper training, but it was good experience working for someone with so much knowledge. He didn't pay us well, but I didn't expect to earn much in my first job.

M And what about the shop? Was it a nice place to work?

W As I say, it was an expensive shop, and the cakes were beautiful. Then in the morning there was this wonderful smell of bread baking. The first week was difficult because I just wanted to eat the cakes which wasn't allowed but then I lost interest in them. We had to keep everything clean, and that was hard work.

M Did you do any of the baking yourself?

W There were two chefs who were specialists in making cakes for celebrations and creating new bread recipes I loved watching them at work, but I wasn't allowed to touch the ones on display in the windows. We sold sandwiches at lunchtime again, very luxurious ones and the shop assistants had to make those I learn to put in really generous fillings, much more than I used at home.

M How did you get on with the other shop assistants?

W One of them was my best friend, which was great, but the full-time staff some treated us like silly schoolgirls because we couldn't cook. But I was surprised because the full-time assistants couldn't add up in their head. I was good at it, but they used calculators if there was anything difficult to work out.

M Did you enjoy serving customers in the shop?

W The best part of the day was lunchtime, when we were busy. Time just flew. Then it was interesting when people came in to plan a party or a wedding. One of the chefs would come through to discuss the design of the cake. Some customers thought the prices were too high, but usually ended up buying the cakes anyway.

M Today we have with us in the studio Lucy Rainbow, who earns her living as a painter. Good morning, Lucy. Can you tell us about your job?

W Well, I don't paint pretty pictures you can hang on your walls at home. Mainly I work in the theatre painting the background scenery for plays I've also done a couple of CD covers. That was great, because I got to meet my favourite pop stars.

M So how did all this start?

W Well, I always intended to become a proper artist. But I couldn't sell any of my paintings, and anyway I got bored working alone! I was offered a job in an advertising agency but the idea of working in a theatre attracted me more. I get the chance to paint something different every day. I get paid reasonably well, and I work with a team of wonderful people.

M So you enjoy your work, but doesn't it have any disadvantages?

W Mostly, I love it. The only thing that causes me stress is that often I have too many things to do at the same time while at other times I have nothing to do. It's difficult to organise my time, but I always make sure I stop for lunch.

M How many hours do you work on an average day?

W There's no such thing as an average day! But generally, I start work at eight in the morning, and go through until seven. That makes it an eleven-hour day, which is much longer than the eight hours that most people work.

M Is your journey to work difficult?

W Not really. My dream job would be one where I could walk to work but that hasn't happened yet. I could drive to the theatre, but that makes me tired and I get a lot of my best ideas when I'm on my way to work, on the bus or train.

M Do you have time for any hobbies?

W Not as much as I'd like. I used to play a lot of tennis until I hurt my ankle and I was a regular visitor to an art gallery near my home until it closed down. In the little spare time I have, I'm doing a course in computer graphics. I hope what I learn will help me in my job.

M Well, thank you, Lucy. It's been interesting talking to you.

W My guest today is Tim Jones, who organizes an international summer course for young musicians. Tim tell us all about it.

M Well, I'm lucky to have such a great job. Basically, young musicians come from all over the world and learn to play together as an orchestra. By the end of the six- week course, they're really good and hearing them play is what gives me most pleasure. Unfortunately, I don't get to know them all that well, as organizing every single detail of the course keeps me busy.

W So, how do you find the young musicians?

M We advertise on the Internet. Anyone between the ages of sixteen and twenty can complete the application form and email it to us along with a short recording of their playing. We're not looking for perfect performances or the stars of tomorrow just people good enough to play in an orchestra. The course is in English but only a basic level of spoken language is necessary.

W And the teachers?

M The teachers are well-known musicians. Because they want to help young people, they do this work for a very low salary which is very kind of them. But it's my job to take care of them and make sure they're happy with their accommodation and so on. They generally have a great time, but some of them can be a bit difficult and sometimes complain about things.

W So where is the course held?

M In different places each year, actually, but it's usually a university during the summer holidays. They have large halls for practicing, plus plenty of bedrooms and dining- rooms. Most importantly, though, the place has to have good rail, road and air connections so somewhere in the middle of the countryside's no good.

W Do the students bring their own instruments?

M Mostly, yes. So, another thing to consider is security. Storing instruments in a locked room when they're not being used is essential. Can you imagine a hundred or more musical instruments lying around violins, trumpets, flutes, cellos - all worth a lot of money. It would be terrible if one got damaged, or even worse stolen!

W And at the end of the course, there's a concert tour.

M That's right. I book concert halls and work out the programmes months in advance. It's important to get it right. Ticket prices aren't high, because we're not a professional orchestra but lots of people buy them. We don't make a profit, but take enough money to pay for the students' travel and living expenses. It's a fantastic experience for them.

M Today, I'm talking to Marta Stanston, who runs her own 'mobile' restaurant. Marta, How did you get into the restaurant business?

W Well, I learnt to cook at college. I always wanted to open my own restaurant but had no money so I got a job as a chef. I had all sorts of ideas for new dishes, which the staff thought would sell but the guy who owned the place wasn't interested. That's when a friend told me about the 'mobile restaurant' idea. It sounded great.

M Tell us about it.

W Well, it works like this: you decide on a menu obviously you have to be able to cook then you advertise it so people can book a meal. The most amazing thing is all the advertising's done through social-networking websites. People set up tables in their sitting-room, or in a City car park, an empty factory - anywhere in fact. And because you know how many people you're cooking for, food doesn't get wasted.

M So why was it good for you?

W Well, various reasons. Like, I could buy all the ingredients without risk because you make customers pay in advance. The greatest advantage, though, is by having a maximum of ten customers. I didn't need to hire a waiter. Then, of course, I could prepare everything at home just take a camping gas cooker with me, plus some plates, glasses, knives and forks.

M Do you never run into problems?

W The whole experience is fun. People watch you cook and the atmosphere's relaxed. I did one meal on a beach which almost went wrong because I didn't think about the wind blowing sand into people's food. Fortunately, I'd brought a large umbrella to protect myself from the sun so I put it around their table instead!

M And you sometimes use your own flat?

W If the weather's bad, people come to my home instead, but it gets very crowded. Even though I've actually got enough chairs and a big table, it's not ideal. I was worried we might disturb the neighbours but they've been alright about it. I love the temporary feel of the mobile idea, so home's not really what it's about.

M So, what's the future of mobile restaurants?

W Well, it's rather uncertain. Lots of new ones are popping up because it's become fashionable. I think health inspectors will want to check them out. That doesn't worry me, because I'm a trained chef. But if someone got ill in a less serious one, we might all get a bad name. So I guess inspections are a good thing.

W Jack Salter is a young Canadian who has just won the young photographer of the year competition. Jack, is that right you started out taking photos of Street signs?

M That's right. I've been serious about photography for about a year, maybe a year and a half but I've been taking photos ever since I was little. I probably first picked up a camera when I was about seven and went around taking photos of street signs of all shapes and sizes. My mother tells me it was all down to my being attracted to the bright colours. I guess she's right.

W Can you tell me a little about the winning photograph?

M It was the first day of dry weather for a while and I decided to go out and play around with some new kit for my camera. I started off in my own yard. There wasn't much to photograph though until this butterfly happened to land on a large flower, and fortunately I was able to get what turned out to be the prizewinning photo.

W Were you happy with the photograph?

M I was lucky actually, because on the camera screen the butterfly didn't look terribly amazing. I could see that it was in a great position and the background scene was nice and clear but you couldn't see the pattern on its wings because of the size of the screen. It was only when I saw the picture on the computer that I realized how good it was.

W What do you think of the other photos from the competition?

M I've seen the work on display with mine and the standard is hard to believe. There are photos of animals and plants from all over the world and you can see the work of photographers from places as far apart as Russia and Australia.

W Has anything changed for you since winning the competition?

M That's a hard question. Before winning I'd been concentrating mainly on taking photos of people, although after coming to London for the exhibition and talking to all the other photographers I intend to get more into doing shots of landscapes in different countries.

W Do you have any advice for young people starting out in photography?

M Don't make excuses. My entry was taken with an excellent camera but that's not everything. My method is just to get out there, and do it and you don't have to go far to get the shot, you'll find something. You'll start to love it.

3. I've seen the work on display with mine and the Standard is hard to believe. There are photos of animals and plants from all over the world, and you can see the work of photographers from places as far apart as Russia and Australia.
   (Tôi đã thấy tác phẩm được trưng bày và chất lượng của bức ảnh thực sự ngoài sức tưởng tượng. Ở đó có ảnh của động vật và cây cối từ khắp nơi trên thế giới, bạn có thể thấy tác phẩm của các nhiếp ảnh gia từ những nơi xa xôi như Nga hay Úc.)
4. Before winning I'd been concentrating mainly on taking photos of people, although after coming to London for the exhibition and talking to all the other photographers, I intend to get more into doing shots of landscapes in different countries.

(Trước khi giành được giải, tôi chỉ tập trung vào chụp ảnh con người, mặc dù sau khi đến buổi triển lãm ở Luân Đôn và nói chuyện với những nhiếp ảnh gia khác, tôi dự định sẽ chụp khung cảnh thiên nhiên ở nhiều quốc gia khác nhau.)

M My guest today is Amy Rowntree, who's a fashion designer. Amy, when did you decide you wanted a career in fashion?

W Well, I started experimenting with the clothes I wore myself while I was still at school. It wasn't until I left school and worked as an assistant in a big store though that I knew I wanted a career in fashion. It was after that I got involved in running fashion shows.

M So, what skills does a fashion designer need?

W Well, you need to know how to turn your first idea into clothes that are ready for someone to wear. It's useful to know about materials like wool and cotton. The essential thing though is a knowledge of the techniques used in creating clothes. You also have to be patient, especially at the start of your career.

M What do you find most enjoyable about working in fashion?

W It's pleasing to see an idea come to life when you see the clothes in a show. It's also great to go from being completely unknown, to fashion stores knowing exactly who you are when you ring up that's the best thing about it for me it's hard work selling my designs but it's good to earn money doing something you love.

M And what about the current fashion scene?

W I feel that the main aim now is to make clothes easy for people to wear. I understand that's important and actually sports clothes are what make the most money for the fashion industry. But I think you need to design really beautiful clothes too. I'd like to see more of fashion as a kind of art.

M Do you find it easy to think of new designs?

W Oh, yes. I get ideas all the time, and I draw them so that I don't forget them. And I take photos too. I often get my ideas from things I see when I'm out in streets and parks. I don't get many ideas from clothes in museums although I know other designers do.

M And are you working on any new projects at the moment?

W Well, my big ambition is to put on a fashion show in New York, but no luck yet! I've been asked to design the clothes for a film though, so I'm working on that. It'll be out next summer. And I'm talking with a big store in London about the possibility of doing a special range of suits for men.

M Right, Sandra. You wanted to see me to get some feedback on your group's proposal. The one you're submitting for the Geography Society field trip competition. I've had a look through your proposal and I think it's a really good choice. In fact, I only have a few things to say about it but even in an outline document like this you really have to be careful to avoid typos and problems with layout in the proposal and even in the contents page. So read it through carefully before submitting it, okay?

W Will do.

M And I've made a few notes on the proposal about things which could have been better sequenced.

W Okay.

M As for the writing itself, I've annotated the proposal as and where I thought it could be improved. Generally speaking, I feel you've often used complex structures and long sentences for the sake of it and as a consequence although your paragraphing and inclusion of subheadings help ... it's quite hard to follow your train of thought at times. So cut them down a bit, can you?

W Really?

M Yes. And don't forget simple formatting like numbering.

W Didn't I use page numbers?

M I didn't mean that. Look, you've remembered to include headers and footers, which is good, but listing ideas clearly is important. Number them or use bullet points, which is even clearer. Then you'll focus the reader on your main points. I thought your suggestion to go to the Navajo Tribal Park was a very good idea.

W I've always wanted to go there. My father was a great fan of cowboy films and the Wild West so I was subjected to seeing all the epics, many of which were shot there. As a consequence, it feels very familiar to me and it's awesome both geographically and visually, so it's somewhere I've always wanted to visit. The subsequent research I did and the online photographs made me even keener.

(Cho dù với dàn ý, chứ chưa phải bài hoàn chỉnh như thế này thì em cũng cần tránh những lỗi về đánh máy và bố cục của văn bản, thậm chí là cả bố cục của trang nội dung nữa.)

   (Nói chung, thầy thấy em hay dùng câu phức và câu dài. Mặc dù việc chia đoạn và đặt tiêu đề phụ cũng giúp bố cục bài viết rõ hơn, tuy nhiên đôi lúc thầy vẫn thấy khó theo dõi mạch văn của bài. Vì thế em nên cắt ngắn những câu dài ấy nhé!)
3. You've remembered to include headers and footers, which is good, but listing ideas clearly is important. Number them or use bullet points, which is even clearer.
   (Em đã nhớ phải thêm tiêu đề và chân trang, như vậy rất là tốt, nhưng việc liệt kê ý tưởng rõ ràng cũng rất quan trọng. Em nên đánh số và sử dụng chấm đầu dòng, như vậy sẽ giúp nội dung rõ ràng hơn.)

W I've been reading your personal statement, Paul. First, let's talk about your work experience in South America. What took you there? Was it to gain more fluency in Spanish?

M Well, as I'm combining Spanish with Latin American studies, my main idea was to find out more about the way people lived there. My spoken Spanish was already pretty good in fact.

W So you weren't too worried about language barriers?

M No. In fact, I ended up teaching English there, although that wasn't my original choice of work. I see.

W How did you find out about all this?

M I found an agency that runs all kinds of voluntary projects in South America.

W What kind of work?

M Well, there were several possibilities.

W You mean construction? Engineering work?

M Yes, getting involved in building projects was an option. Then there was tourism. taking tourists for walks around the volcanoes which I actually chose to do and then there was work with local farmers.

W But you didn't continue with that project. Why not?

M Because I never really knew whether I'd be needed or not. I'd thought it might be difficult physically, but I was certainly fit enough ... no, I wanted to do something that had more of a proper structure to it, I suppose. I get de-motivated otherwise.

W What do you think you learned from your experience? It must have been a great opportunity to examine community life.

M Yes, but it was difficult at first to be accepted by the locals. It was a very remote village and some of them were reluctant to speak to me although they were always interested in my clothes and how much I'd had to pay for them.

W Well, that's understandable.

M Yes, but things soon improved. What struck me was that when people became more comfortable with me and less suspicious, we really connected with each other in a meaningful way.

W You made good friends?

M Yes, with two of the families in particular.

W Good. What about management. Did you have a project manager?

M Yes and he gave me lots of advice and guidance.

W And was he good at managing too?

M That wasn't his strong point! I think he was often more interested in the academic side of things than filing reports. He was a bit of a dreamer.

W And did you have a contract?

M I had to stay for a minimum of three months. My parents were surprised when I asked to stay longer - six months in the end. I was so happy there.

W And did anything on the administration side of things surprise you? What was the food and lodging like?

M Simple ... but there was plenty to eat and I only paid seven dollars a day for that which was amazing really. And they gave me all the equipment I needed ... even a laptop.

W You didn't expect that then?

M No

W Well, I'll look forward to hearing more.

W Hi Jun. As you know, I've asked you here today to discuss the future of our Self-Access Centre. We have to decide what we want to do about this very important resource for our English language students. So, can you tell me what the students think about this?

M Well, from the students' point of view, we would like to keep it. The majority of students say that they enjoy using it because it provides a variation on the classroom routine and they see it as a pretty major component of their course, but we would like to see some improvements to the equipment, particularly the computers; there aren't enough for one each at the moment and we always have to share.

W Well yes, the teachers agree that it is a very valuable resource but one thing we have noticed is that a lot of the students are using it to check their personal emails. We don't want to stop you students using it, but we think the computers should be used as a learning resource, not for emails. Some of us also think that we could benefit a lot more by relocating the Self-Access Centre to the main University library building. How do you think the students would feel about that, Jun?

M Well, the library is big enough to incorporate the Self-Access Centre, but it wouldn't be like a class activity anymore. Our main worry would be not being able to go to a teacher for advice. I'm sure there would be plenty of things to do but we really need teachers to help us choose the best activities.

W Well, there would still be a teacher present and he or she would guide the activities of the students. We wouldn't just leave him to get on with it.

M Yes, but I think the students would be much happier keeping the existing set-up; they really like going to the Self-Access Centre with their teacher and staying together as a group to do activities. If we could just improve the resources and facilities, I think it would be fine. Is the cost going to be a problem?

W It's not so much the expense that I'm worried about, and we've certainly got room to do it, but it's the problem of timetabling a teacher to be in there outside class hours. If we're going to spend a lot of money on equipment and resources, we really need to make sure that everything is looked after properly. Anyway, let's make some notes to see just what needs doing to improve the Centre.

W For the second in our series about locally-run businesses, we meet Simon Winridge, co-founder of the hugely-successful Winridge Forest Railway Park. Welcome, Simon. Now, perhaps you can begin by telling us a little bit about how it all started.

M Well, during the 1970s, my wife, Liz and I had just acquired 80 acres of sheep-farming land, and we decided to settle down and have children. Pretty soon we had a daughter, Sarah, and a son, Duncan. The place was wonderful for the kids: they particularly loved trains and gradually built up an enormous network of miniature railway track. I began to develop larger-scale models of locomotives but we didn't think anything more of it until I went on a trip to a theme park near Birmingham and decided we could do a much better job! So we set up a small one ourselves based on the miniature railway and we opened to the public for just a month that year. 1984 - in July - our driest month because our children said they didn't want our guests to have a miserable, wet visit. I dealt with Park business and Liz carried on with the farm work. It soon became clear that we were onto a winner. We began to extend the railway track and lay it among more interesting landscape by planting trees, which in turn attracted more wildlife, and by making cuttings through the rock. Nowadays, we're open all year round and we're pleased to say that Winridge is one of the most popular visitor attractions in the area with 50,000 visitors a year - a million and a half people have been through our doors since we opened. All these visitors mean we have had to expand our operation and it's now a truly family concern I'm near to retirement age so I only concern myself with looking after the mechanical side of things - keeping the trains going. Liz now devotes all her energies to recruiting and supporting the large squadron of workers, which keep the place running smoothly. We're really pleased that after some years away teaching, Sarah has now returned to the park and makes sure the visitors are kept fed and watered, which keeps her pretty busy as you can imagine. Our son Duncan has been a stalwart at the park for the last 10 years taking over from me in the area of construction and I'll say a little bit more about that in a moment and his new wife Judith, has also joined the team in charge of retail. That's becoming a tremendous growth area for us a lot of people want to buy souvenirs.

M Erm ... hello Professor. I'm John Wishart. I'm working on my entry for the Global design competition. My tutor said you might be able to help me with it.

W Oh, yes, I got a copy of your drawings Come in and tell me about it. What sort of competition is it?

M Well, it's an international design competition and we have to come up with a new design for a typical domestic kitchen appliance.

W I see and are there any special conditions? Does it have to save energy for example?

M Actually that was the focus in last year's competition. This year's different. We have to adopt an innovative approach to existing technology using it in a way that hasn't been thought of before.

W I see, that sounds tricky. And what kitchen appliance have you chosen?

M Well I decided to choose the dishwasher

W Interesting, what made you choose that?

M Well, they're an everyday kitchen appliance in most Australian houses. But they're all pretty boring and almost identical to each other. I think some people will be prepared to pay a little extra for something that looks different.

W It's a nice idea. I see you've called your design ‘the Rockpool’; why is that?

M Basically, because it looks like the rock pools you find on a beach. The top is made of glass so that you can look down into it.

W And there's a stone at the bottom. Is that just for decoration?

M Actually it does have a function. Instead of pushing a button, you turn the stone.

W So it's really just a novel way of starting the dishwasher..

M That's right. It's a really nice design, but what makes it innovative?

W Well, I decided to make a dishwasher that uses carbon dioxide.

M In place of water and detergent? How will you manage that?

W The idea is to pressurise the carbon dioxide so that it becomes a liquid. The fluid is then released into the dishwasher where it cleans the dishes all by itself.

M Sounds like a brilliant idea! Your system will totally do away with the need for strong detergents. So what happens once the dishes are clean?

W Well, to allow them to dry, the liquid carbon dioxide and the waste materials all go to an area called the holding chamber. That’s where the liquid is depressurised and so it reverts to a gas. Then the oil and grease are separated out and sent to the waste system.

M It sounds like you've thought it all out very thoroughly. So, what happens to the carbon dioxide once the process is complete? Not wasted I hope.

W Actually, that’s where the real savings are made. The carbon dioxide is sent back to the cylinder and can be used again and again.

M What a terrific idea. Do you think it will ever be built?

W Probably not, but that’s OK.

M Well, I’m sure a lot of positive things will come out of your design.

I'll show you a quick test to find out. But before I do, let me say this. In this test, it's important to understand what you have read. Rushing to beat the clock is pointless. You won't enjoy the reading or understand it well. You'll also get a false measure of your reading speed. when you finish, you should try to see what you remember.

They can also be a line. The line is continuous. It has no space between each point. Part of a line, with points at each end, is called a line segment Two line segments can be the same length. We call these line segments congruent That just means the I ne segments are equal in length.

We know that Ludwig van Beethoven was born in 1770 in Bonn, Germany but we are uncertain of the month. Beethoven wrote hundreds of songs. One of his most famous is his Fifth Symphony. The first four notes go like this: dah dah dah da! Almost everyone recognizes them. He was the first to use trombones in a symphony. At age 28, he began to go deaf. Yet, he kept on writing and conducting. He never got married. But after he died friends found some love letters. We don't know who he wrote them to. Beethoven died in 1827.

Some animals hibernate in holes in the ground. others sleep in caves, under bushes or at the base of trees. Bears hibernate. So do cold-blooded animals, like frogs and snakes. When animals are hibernating it seems like they're dead They have slow heartbeats and they almost stop breathing They have stored extra energy and fat to keep them alive. Another name for the South Pole is Antarctica. This is a continent, but no people live there. There's a good reason for this. It's the coldest, windiest place on Earth. The lowest temperature ever measured was in Antarctica. Minus 88 degrees celsius! Ninety-eight percent of the ground is permanently frozen, and the continent contains 87 percent of the world's ice. Antarctica's only human occupants are scientists. They go there to learn how Antarctica used to be millions of years ago, when it was located at the equator. Antarctica used to be connected to Australia, before all the continents on the planet shitted.

If a play makes you laugh, it's a comedy. Comedies have humorous characters and happy endings. A good example of a comedy is Shakespeare's classic Much Ado About Nothing. Another popular style is called tragedy. Tragedies usually tell how a hero ruins his life, talling from good fortune to bad fortune because of a "tragic flaw" in character. One example is the play Ghosts, by Henrik Ibsen.

Um, modern years have produced a third style, called tragicomedy. In tragicomedies, the play seems as though it will end in tragedy but instead has a humorous or unclear ending. An example is Saint Joan, by George Bernard Shaw.

One of the most effective ways to increase your vocabulary is through newspapers. They are cheap, and they have a wide variety of words. When you read an English newspaper, make a list of eight to ten words you don't know. Look them up in a dictionary. Then add them to your vocabulary notebook. If you learn eight new words each day, you will be learning new words taster than the average American. Professor? Yes? How can we remember the words after we write them? Track and Field events happened long before they became a sport. The San people in Africa are one example. They still hold what's called a "Persistence" hunt. The men find the tracks of an antelope herd. They find the antelope and follow them for several days and nights. During this time, they study the animals and choose one. Then, the hunt begins. Only the fastest runner will go after the chosen animal. He and the animal may run for as long as eight hours. If the hunter "persists," the deer will finally get tired and fall. Let's talk about sneezing. when someone sneezes — Ah choo!— the customary response is, "Bless you" or "God bless you". Why do we say this? There are several theories. Some of these are superstitions that is, things that many people believe but that aren't really true. One superstition is that saying "bless you" keeps the devil from flying down your throat. Another is that "bless you" keeps your soul from flying out of your body. Actually, there is a historical reason for this custom. There was a pope in Rome named Gregory the Great. When he was elected pope, the great plague was beginning all over Europe. Thousands of people were dying. In fact, the pope before Gregory had died of the plague. To get rid of the plague, Pope Gregory ordered people to march through the streets, asking for God's help. If someone sneezed, others would immediately say "God bless you!" They hoped this would keep the person who sneezed from getting the plague. Today, of course, we know that when you sneeze, the devil trying to rush down your throat. Your soul won't leave your body. And saying "bless you" to sneezers in the street is not going to cure disease. We do know, though, that each sneeze forces thousands of germs into the air People keep germs out of public places by covering their mouths when they sneezers And hearing an old-fashioned "bless you" from a stranger can make us feel better when the sneezes begin.

It's a beautiful blue sky today. Ever wonder why it's blue? It's because the sun's rays scatter, or spread out, as they enter the Earth's atmosphere. Blue rays are scattered most; they seem to be all over the sky. Yellow rays are scattered less. This is why the sun looks yellow most of the time. But, after sunrise and just before sunset, the sun looks red. Why? Because then the rays must travel a longer Folktales are stories that grow out of the lives or imaginations of people, or folk. Folktales began as an attempt to explain and understand the world around us Many folktales all over the world are nearly the same. Travelers passed them on from one country to another. Each person telling the folktales changes it slightly. The stories that traveled mostly over land changed a great deal. The ones that traveled by water changed less There are many different kinds of folktales. Some have simple plots with lots of repeated phrases and words. These are called cumulative folktales. One example is called "There Was an Old Lady Who Swallowed a Fly". This sentence is repeated on almost every page of the story. In some stories, animals talk just like humans. These are talking beast folktales. A famous example is "The Three Little Pigs". Humorous tales are meant for tun and nonsense. They are usually about someone who makes unbelievably tunny mistakes; such as the Norwegian husband who has to take care of his house and nearly destroys it. Romances are stories in which lovers seem hopelessly separated until magic brings them back together. A good example is"Beauty and the Beast". But there's another china-the kind you eat off of. This china is a fancy type of porcelain. Porcelain is a material used to make plates, cups, and bowls. When people get married in America, one of oldest customs is for the bride and groom to choose which type of china they want for their new home. There are four main processes in creating china. These are clay making, glazing, and decorating. In the clay-making process, five ingredients are mixed together with water and shaped into tubes. These tubes are called pugs: P-U-G-S. In the mold-making process, plaster is poured into metal molds to make productions molds. These production molds are then used to shaped the pugs into plates, cup, and bowls. Next, comes the glazing process. Glaze is like liquid glass. When it's heated, glaze forms a protective shell around each piece of china. Glaze is incredibly strong. A store in Canada once showed how strong china is by using four teacups to support a race car! Can you picture that a heavy car with only one small cup under each wheel? After glaze, the china is ready for decorating. Here, artists use 85 patterns and 400 different shapes to make the china look beautiful. Then, it's ready to be sold.

More people are buying home computers and using them for home networks. They need taster ways to get information over the Internet. Right now, there are mainly two avenues for information to be sent. These are cable modems and Asymmetric Digital Subscriber Lines or ADSL. These taster ways of sending information are called broadband connections. Cable modems and ADSL are both types of broadband connections. They are much taster than a 56K modem. There is another new kind of DSL connection. It is known as very high bit rate DSL or VDSL. Some companies already have this for certain places. VDSL isn't everywhere yet, but it may be very soon. Many people like it and are beginning to use it. VDSL accommodates a very, very large amount of bandwidth. It gives up to about 52 megabytes per second. In other words, it provides 52 Mbps In comparison, ADSL or cable modems can only give 8 to 10 megabytes per second. It's easy to see that VDSL is a lot faster. VDSL will soon be more common, making home networks cost much less. In the United States, a telephone line has two copper wires. These wires have a very broad bandwidth. A telephone call only uses a very small part of the bandwidth. The telephone wires can carry much more information than telephone calls. DSL can use this extra bandwidth at the same time a call is being made. It can do this without changing the sound of the telephone call.

Most animals in the world have some kind of way to hide themselves so that they can hunt for food and protect themselves from other animals. This method of hiding is called camouflage C-A-M-O-U-F-L-A-G-E The simplest form of camouflage is for animals to "blend in" with their surroundings. Their colors match the surroundings in which they live, which makes them hard to see. Deer and other forest animals, for example, have light brown colors that help them blend in with the brown trees and dirt on the forest ground. Many fish have a gray-blue color. This helps them blend in with the soft light under water. other animals use color patterns to help them blend in. A tiger's pattern of black stripes and orange fur blends into the long grass where it hunts. This makes the tiger difficult for its victims to spot-until it’s too late! Another form of camouflage is called copying. For instance, a king snake is red, yellow, and black. It copies the colors of the coral snake. The coral snake is very dangerous; its bite can kill you. The king snake is not dangerous, but other animals are afraid to attack the king snake because it looks like a coral snake. A third form of camouflage is disguise D-I-S-G-U-l-S-E This means that an animal looks like something else. For instance, a crocodile in the water can look just like a floating log. This disguise helps it catch deer when they come near the water to drink.

Mmm. I love coffee. It wakes me up! You know why? Because it has caffeine. Caffeine is a kind of drug. Ah! Caffeine is found: naturally in many plants, such as coffee beans, tea leaves and cocoa nuts. It's also added artificially to many other kinds of food and drinks. So, it's safe to say that the typical American gets plenty of caffeine. As a matter of fact, most of us get too much. More than half of all adults in the United States consume more than 300 milligrams of caffeine each day. Including me! Seriously, though ..too much caffeine is not good for your body. Caffeine interferes with a chemical in your brain called adenosine. That's A-D-E-N-O-S-l-N-E. Now normally adenosine helps prepare your body for rest This chemical slows down nerve cells, which causes you to become sleepy. To the nerve cells in your brain, caffeine looks just like adenosine, but caffeine acts differently. Instead of slowing down your nerve cells, caffeine speeds them up. As a result, your heart starts to beat faster. Your breathing tubes open wider. Your blood pressure rises. Blood vessels tighten near the surface of your skin. The blood flowing into your stomach slows down. Your muscles tighten up, ready for action. This is why, after consuming a big cup of coffee, you feel excited You can feel your heartbeat increasing. We use microscopes to help us study cells. Because cells are so small, we can't see them without magnification um, the ability to make them look bigger. The first microscopes were called light microscopes. They were pretty simple devices. They were also simple to use. Scientists first cut the cells, or specimens, into thin sections. Then they stained the specimens with different colored materials, called dyes. The dyes helped them see the specimens more clearly. Unfortunately, dyes often killed the cells, too. That limited what scientists could find out about the specimen. In recent years, we have developed more powerful microscopes. These help us view living specimens. One of these new microscopes is called the phase-contrast microscope It's made in such a way that part of the light passing through it moves more slowly than the rest of the light. We say this part of the light is "out of phase" with the rest of the light. This enables scientists to see differences in living specimens as light and shade. Another type of new microscope is the electron microscope. This uses electrons to form images, instead of light. Electrons travel in waves, similar to light, but their wavelengths are over 100,000 times shorter than those of light. Therefore, they can give much clearer magnification. Electron microscopes even allow scientists to take pictures of the cells they are studying!

1. The first microscope was called light microscopes. They were pretty simple devices. They were also simple to use. Scientists first cut the cells or specimen into thin sections. Then they stained the specimens with different colored materials, called dyes.

Những nhà khoa học đã cắt những tế bào hay mẫu vào trong những lát mỏng. Rồi họ làm biến màu những mẫu với nguyên liệu được nhuộm màu khác, gọi là thuốc nhuộm.)

So, you've heard of the Gettysburg Address. But do you know the story behind it? The worst battle of the American Civil War was tought in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. The Northern Army tought back the Southern Army. The battle lasted three days. Afterward, the field was left covered with bodies of dead soldiers. In November 1863, President Abraham Lincoln came to Gettysburg He was to speak at the opening of the cemetery there. Music played and soldiers saluted. Edward Everett, governor of Massachusetts, talked first for almost two hours. Then Lincoln stood up. He looked out over the valley. Then, he began to speak. He said they couldn't do anything to make this place special. He said that the soldiers who had tought so hard had already done that. He said that, everyone would soon forget what was spoken that day but he said that what the soldiers did would never be forgotten. He said everyone should keep doing what these soldiers began. They should keep fighting for freedom for all the people. Then, they could make sure the soldiers didn't die needlessly. The presidents speech only lasted two minutes! Everyone cheered and then left. Lincoln turned to Edward Everett. He said he thought he should have planned his speech better. Edward Everett didn't agree. He said, "It was perfect. You said more in two minutes than I did in two hours." Afterward, the newspapers said it was a great speech. And, as you know, Americans still remember it today.

Let's begin our study of Vitamin D. It's something we must have. Among other things, it helps our bodies use the important min-earl, calcium. Calcium makes uor bones strong. It also helps our nerves and muscles work the way they should. Let's open our textbooks to page 63. I'd like you to take a look at these pictures. As you can see, these children don't look well at all. The bones in their heads haven't come together as they should. That's why their heads are too big. Their legs curve out. The bones are too soft to stand on These children didn't get enough Vitamin D. Happily, we don't see this often any more. Vitamin D is not in most of the foods we eat. We get it mostly from the sun. Ultraviolet rays from the sun transform something in our skin. It becomes what's called previtamin D3. Inside our bodies, it can changes again. It become what's called active vitamin D. With active Vitamin D, our bones can make enough calcium to stay hard. Active Vitamin D helps us have enough calcium for our nerves too. This help us feel calm and sleep well. Today, many people need to have strong bones. Many older people's bones, especially, break far too easily. One main reason why is that people don't get nearly enough sunlight. We close windows to stay warm in the winter. In summer, we close windows for air conditioning. But we ready need time in the sunshine almost every day.

I did a search on Google yesterday. It was amazing. I types in "horses" and hit the search button. It less than a second, it showed me more than 32 million websites related to horses. Do you ever wonder how computers can think so fast? Well, I did another Google search, and I found out. Computer chips are based on something called Boolean logic. This is a type of thinking developed in the mid-1800s by George Boole – B-O-O-L-E. Boolean logic maps information into bits and bytes. It begins with seven electronic pathways, calles gates. The simplest gate is called a NOT gate. The NOT gate takes one bit of input, which we'll label A, and produces an outputs, which we'll label Q, that is exactly opposite. So, if input, A, is one, the output Q, will be zero. If A is zero, Q will be one. Simple. Next is the AND gate. The idea behind an AND gate is this: if there are two bits of input, say, A and B, and if A and B are both the same, then the output, called Q, should be the same. After the NOT gate and the AND get comes the OR gate. Its basic idea is, "If A or B is one, or if both A and B are one, then Q is also one". The next two gates are called NAND and NOR. These two gates are simply combinations of an AND or an OR gate with a NOT gate. Now, next comes...

Let's begin. Last week, we learned how most fish use their swim bladder to move around in the water. Remember, when the fish breathes oxygen, some of that oxygen goes into its bladder. This causes the fish to rise in the water. When it squeezes some of the gas out of its bladder, it sinks toward the bottom. So, it can move vertically-go up and down kind of like a hot-air balloon. A shark is more like an airplanes. Sharks don't have a swim bladder, so they use their forward movement to control their vertical position. The tail is like the shark's propeller. The shark swings it back and forth to move forward. In an airplane, this forward movement pushes air around the wings. For a sharks, this forward movement pushes water around the fins. On both cases, the forward movement creates lift the airplanes and shark both rise. Sharks have two pairs of fins on each side of their bodies. These fins are about the position as the main wings and tail wings, on an airplane The shark can position these fins at different angles. This changes the path of the water around them and enables the shark to move quickly upward or downward. The shark also has two vertical fins on its back. These are like the stabilizer fin on an airplane. They allow the shark to keep its balance as it moves through the water and help it turn quickly left and right.

Welcome, ladies and gentlemen, to the Morecambe Museum of Fashion. Before we go up to the fashion exhibition 'Clothes of the Future' I would like to show you some slides on the screen, and say a few words about the history of fashion.

I will also mention some of the important people in fashion. This will provide an introduction for you and will prepare you for the clothes that we're going to see in the exhibition. As I'm sure you know nowadays fashion is something that almost everybody enjoys. People of all age groups and all incomes usually have an interest in what they wear But this has only recently happened, and I will tell you why. Until the beginning of this century, it was only the rich who could afford to follow fashion There were no factories to make many copies of the same article, as there are today. Rich men and women wore trousers, jackets and dresses which were made especially for them. This picture here shows a young lady being measured for a dress that she will have made by hand, exactly how she wants it to be Ladies' clothes in those days were long and usually tight-fitting and made of heavy material. However, the new century - the 1900s - brought new ideas. The important person at this time was Coco Chanel who started making clothes in 1908, in Paris. Many people think she was the 20th century's most important influence on fashion Chanel loved to wear loose-fitting clothes and produced jackets and skirts which everyone admired. Here's a picture of one of her ladies' suits. Even today people still wear styles like this when they want to look smart. Young Paris designers all began to produce simple clothes, and skirts started to get shorter. The idea of special clothes for playing sports also became popular in the early 1920s. Things like long shorts and tennis clothes started to become fashionable Soon factories produced these new styles more cheaply and then many more people were able to enjoy fashion. In 1947, after the Second World War Christian Dior used all the new materials available to produce a fashion which was known as the 'New Look' As you can see in this picture, he made skirt lengths longer again. Later, in the 60s, 'flower power' and student fashion were popular. In London, Mary Quant introduced short skirts. These were worn with boots that went up to the knee. Look at the white, shiny boots in this picture! And now we come to today's exhibition Some of the clothes you will see today will be very different from anything which you have seen before. The exhibition aims to take a look at the sort of clothes that we might wear in the next 50 years. Let's go inside and have a look at the exciting clothes that are waiting for us ...

Right, everyone about the trip to the Jubilee Arts Centre next Wednesday. As you know, we have tickets for the Centre's two theatres and the concert hall. Those of you with concert tickets will hear piano music by Chopin and Schumann. Those with tickets for the main theatre will see Shakespeare's Twelfth Night while people going to the smaller theatre will see The Wild Duck by Ibsen. Although all the theatre and concert tickets have gone if anyone else would like to join us on the trip I can get tickets for the Arts Centre cinema to see the Australian comedy film Spider and Rose. The shows begin at half past seven, but we'll leave early so you can spend time looking round the Arts Centre. The coach will leave here at 3.30 and arrive at the Arts Centre at about a quarter to five. Let me tell you what you can do there. The Centre has a lot for art-lovers. In the Art Gallery there's an exhibition of the history of Russian ballet. It has dresses and shoes worn by famous dancers and photos of past performances. With your student card, you can get in very cheaply. There are also some interesting free exhibitions. On the ground floor you can see prize-winning paintings from a children's competition, and gold jewellery made by Scottish artists. On the first floor there's an exhibition of South American photographs, and there's no charge for that either. I know some of you hope to do some shopping. The Centre has a bookshop on the first floor and there's a souvenir shop by the ticket office. If you're more interested in clothes and shoes there's a large shopping centre five minutes' walk from the Arts Centre. You'll probably want to eat before the show. The Balcony Restaurant has a menu with a wide range of meals and waiter service, but it is rather expensive. Or there's the Fountain Restaurant whose special three-course dinner is good value for money. There's also Charlie's coffee bar which serves coffee, sandwiches and cakes. You can get fruit juices and ice cream from the cinema kiosk. After the shows the coach will pick us up at the Bridge Street exit. Everyone should be there by twenty past ten. The two plays will finish at around 10.10 or 10.15. I'm afraid concert-goers will have to wait, as the concert finishes earlier, at ten to ten.

Well, good evening everyone. I've come along to talk to you about my painting. It was just a hobby but it's really more than that now I used to paint in the evenings after work but now I work four days a week instead of five. That means I spend Friday, Saturday and Sunday on my painting. I have pictures in local exhibitions at least once a month. I'd love to give up my job and spend all my time painting, but I work with computers and I earn more that way! I do make some money from selling my pictures enough to pay for all my paint, brushes and paper and a few art lessons I'd love to go to art college full-time for three years but I've got all the rent on my flat to pay and a car to run. I first became interested in art when I was at primary school. I used to go out with some paper and a few pencils during break time and draw anything I saw houses, gardens, people. Then at secondary school we had art classes twice a week and I learnt how to use chalk and then different kinds of paint: water colours, oils and so on. Those classes were really useful for me, and ever since then I've had lessons of some kind. I've attended evening classes and been on what they call painting 'holidays', where you go out into the countryside and paint during the day and then sit and discuss your work with a teacher and the other artists after dinner. Those holidays are great; you learn so much talking to other people studying with you. I've enjoyed painting in lots of different countries I've been to Morocco and painted desert scenes with beautiful sunrises I've been to Greece and Spain and painted pictures of the local people working in the fields near their homes. My favourite place is still Scotland I love walking in the Scottish mountains, and there are so many different birds to see, especially in spring. Well, I'm going to finish now by showing you a video of the places I've visited. After that there'll be a chance to relax with a cup of coffee and then there'll be time for some questions. Oh, and I've got some information about my next art exhibition for you. It's going to be at the Queen's Gallery. Now, if someone would turn off the lights ...

Welcome to this week's book programme. We've got lots of great new books to tell you about. My life, by Joe Wrigley, will keep all fans of Joe's stories happy for hours. It explains a lot about where his ideas come from and gives a picture of what was happening in his life when he was working on his most successful books. I must say, though, that some of it is difficult to understand if you haven't read his other books. Now, for those of you who like a good cry Goodbye to the fields, by Susan Marks tells the sad story of John, a small boy who has to leave the countryside he loves when the family move to London because of his father's job. John and his mother would prefer to stay where they are. It's a long time before the family begins to feel comfortable living in the big city. There are plenty of books with helpful advice this week. First, the A-Z of photography would make a great present for anyone just starting out with a camera. It has everything you need to know to take really good photos, and learn about cameras, film, lighting and so on. This is not one for the experienced photographer, though there's not much advanced information here. Turning to the kitchen Cooking for one, by Adrian White, says on Its cover that even people who hate cooking will find it useful. A month ago, I couldn't even boil an egg but now I'm producing all sorts of dishes, some quite difficult and, yes, they taste quite good, too. I'm actually enjoying cooking now I'm now going to try a new book about cooking Italian food. The last book this week is Holidays in Europe, by Mary Curtis. This is an enjoyable read, which will start your imagination working as you plan for next year's holiday It doesn't matter that the writer doesn't talk about the famous places everyone visits but describes lots of small places away from the main tourist areas. The maps are too small to be useful but the book is still good value for money. That's it for this week, then. Next week, there's a special report on giving books as presents, so if you've saved up your money and you're wondering what to get for a friend or relation for their birthdays, you might get some good ideas ... I'll look forward to talking to you then ...

People always ask me why I only travel the hard way! A lot of television travel programmes are about relaxing holidays on the beach but I've only ever made documentaries about really long trips. The last trip I did was a 50,000-mile journey around the Pacific Ocean and it took 12 months But then my very first trip was a 'round the world' journey, and the most difficult one was probably a car journey from the North Pole to the South Pole! As you can Imagine, I've seen a lot of the world! I'm lucky to be in really excellent health, but life is very short and I've done so much travelling that I want a change. Travelling long distances makes you extremely tired, and although it's still a great pleasure for me I want to do something more relaxing now. I think my next television series might be made nearer England. There's some really interesting work going on in Wales where they've just found what remains of a 2,000-year-old town. Or I might do something about farms in France or even cycling in Holland. There's always something to film if you look hard enough! But I hope the programmes I've made about the really long trips will encourage other people to get on a plane and have some adventures. Some people seem to be afraid of going to a strange country and perhaps being ill there but maybe they realise now that if I can do these trips, so can they. I'm only a very ordinary person. And obviously, you don't have to travel on your own as I always have. I must say that until recently I hadn't ever worried about being so far from home even when the children were very small. But while I was filming in Borneo last year my wife had to have an emergency operation and it really frightened me because I couldn't get back to England. Everything was fine in the end but I wouldn't want to be so far away if anything like that happened to my family again. Perhaps If I spend more time at home I can do more writing. I've done two books so far. I write about places I've seen and my feelings about them. I don't think I'll ever write fiction or poetry but I'd be Interested in writing newspaper articles. My family says I'm very difficult to live with when I'm writing at home ... perhaps that's why they've never complained about me travelling!

Đáp án 1C 2C 3B 4A 5B

1. A lot of television travel programmes are about relaxing holidays on the beach, but I've only ever made documentaries about really long trips. The last trip I did was a 50,000-mile journey around the Pacific Ocean, and it took 12 months. (C) But then my very first trip was a 'round the world' journey, and the most difficult one was probably a car journey from the North Pole to the South Pole!
   (Có nhiều chương trình du lịch truyền hình về những kỳ nghỉ thư giãn trên bãi biển, nhưng tôi chỉ làm những bộ phim tư liệu về những cuộc dạo chơi dài thực sự. Chuyến đi gần đây nhất của tôi là hành trình dài 50000 dặm xung quanh Thái Bình Dương, và nó kéo dài 12 tháng. (C) Còn chuyến đi đầu tiên của tôi lại là chuyến đi vòng quanh thế giới, và chuyến đi khó khăn nhất có lẽ là hành trình từ cực bắc đến cực nam bằng ô tô!)

2. Travelling long distances makes you extremely tired, and although it's still a great pleasure for me, I want to do something more relaxing now.
   (Du lịch đường dài sẽ khiến bạn vô cùng mệt, và dù nó vẫn là sở thích của tôi nhưng bây giờ tôi muốn làm việc gì đó thư giãn hơn hơn.)
3. There's some really interesting work going on in Wales, where they've just found what remains of a 2,000-year-old town. (B) Or I might do something about farms in France, or even cycling in Holland. (A, C, D)
   (Sẽ có một số công việc thú vị ở xứ Wales, nơi mà họ vừa mới tìm thấy những gì còn sót lại của một thị trấn cổ 2, 000 năm tuổi. (B) Hoặc tôi có thể làm cái gì đó về những nông trại ở Nước Pháp, hoặc đạp xe đạp ở Hà Lan.(A, C, D)
4. While I was filming in Borneo last year my wife had to have an emergency operation, and it really frightened me because I couldn't get back to England. Everything was fine in the end - but I wouldn't want to be so far away if anything like that happened to my family again.
   (Trong khi tôi đàn quay phim ở Borneo vào năm ngoái thì vợ tôi phải đi phẫu thuật cấp cứu, điều đó thật sự khiến tôi hoảng sợ bởi vì tôi đã không thể trở lại Anh. Cuối cùng thì mọi thứ vẫn ổn. Nhưng tôi không muốn đi xa nữa vì tôi không muốn những điều tương tự xảy ra với gia đình của tôi một lần nữa.)
5. I write about places I've seen and my feelings about them. I don't think I'll ever write fiction or poetry, but I'd be interested in writing newspaper articles.
   (Tôi viết về những nơi tôi đã từng đến và cảm giác của tôi về những nơi đó. Tôi chưa bao giờ nghĩ về việc viết những điều tưởng tượng hay thơ ca, nhưng tôi cũng khá hứng thú với việc viết báo.)

With us today, to tell us about his trip across Africa is the biologist Paul Hart. We started on the east coast and travelled on foot across Africa to Gabon In the west collecting plants and flowers along the way It wasn't easy, but my route crossed a region rich in plants and I chose it because it won't stay that way for long when more roads are built. It was my only chance to get important information about the natural life of the area. I had a team of eleven scientists We walked from six in the morning but the forest was so thick it took hours to cut our way through it and some days we only walked one kilometre before dark. Fortunately, we carried special equipment that was very light and we took as little food as possible. But we were always tired when we put the tents up at night. Sometimes we saw elephants or lions. They were amazing to watch and never attacked us. Every day,

I collected plants and added to my notes. There was so much new information to write down. There were, of course, some low points, especially when I got anxious about the team. It was my job to make sure everyone got home safely. Towards the end of the trip, I suddenly discovered one day that the food had nearly all gone. It was strange because we'd brought enough dried food with us to last the trip food that wouldn't ever go bad and we'd stopped at villages for fresh food too. But then I found that some of the team had eaten much more than they were supposed to I was angry with them because it was a silly thing to do. Then we started walking again. There were no maps for the area, but we had a local guide Then one of the team got sick and we couldn't go any further We let him rest, but he got much worse. Thankfully his life was saved by a fisherman who came along the river in a boat and took him to a doctor in the nearest village. Finally, I returned home and I'm back with my family and friends. I really missed them while I was away. But I learnt so much on the trip and I'm really glad I went. I was asked to go on another trip this time to Australia but I said that I couldn't because I'm busy here in London. And I think I've done enough travelling.

   (Tôi chọn nơi này bởi vì nó sẽ không hoang sơ như thế này khi có nhiều con đường được xây dựng. Đó là cơ hội duy nhất để lấy những thông tin quan trọng về thế giới tự nhiên của khu vực đó.)

Mặc dù vậy, vẫn có những lúc tôi cảm thấy bất an, nhất là khi lo lắng về cả đội. Vì đảm bảo mọi người trở về nhà an toàn là công việc của tôi.)

Hello, I'm Sarah Brown, and I'm here to tell you about my job as a weather forecaster. I've been a weather forecaster for a television company for seven years and two years ago I became the head of the weather department. Now, I divide my time equally between presenting weather forecasting on television and managing the weather department which has a staff of eleven. At thirty years old I'm the youngest ever head of weather and the first woman to do the job Since our news and weather service goes out all round the world, we all take turns to work at night I prefer that to doing the show when I have to get up at four in the morning. I normally work an eight-hour day and in that time I do ten or twelve forecasts. Before doing a weather forecast, I study data on the computer. This is the information I use in my forecasts. There isn't much time to learn what I have to say but fortunately I've never forgotten my words so I don't get nervous. My husband and I try to have the same free days, but neither of us has a regular pattern of work. He's a pilot on long-distance flights, so although he works hard he has a lot more time at home than I do. We moved to our present house about a year ago, and he's enjoying painting it. I took up flying as a hobby five years ago. I hope to get my pilot's licence this year but because of the job, I haven't been to the flying school for ages For exercise I swim and ski and I like running. I'm really proud of myself for running in the London Marathon it's a forty-kilometre race and I never thought I could manage it! My husband plays tennis, and we sometimes play together, but he's better than me so I never win. Because I'm on world news, people sometimes recognise me in really distant places. Once, in an Indian village, an old man took me to have my photo taken with all his family. I get some lovely letters one person wrote to say that my smile made her feel happy all day. People occasionally even write and ask me to marry them!

Thank you all for coming to my talk this evening. It’s nice to see so many people in the audience. For those of you who don’t know very much about PS Camping let me start by giving you some background information about the company. The company started twenty-five years ago. It actually opened as a retail chain selling camping equipment, and then twenty years ago it bought a small number of campsites in the UK and began offering camping holidays. The company grew rapidly and has been providing holidays in continental Europe for the last fifteen years. If you book a camping holiday with us you'll have a choice of over 300 sites In Italy we now have some 64 sites that we either own, or have exclusive use of. France is where we have the majority of sites, and we currently have a project to expand into Switzerland. We also have a number of sites in Northern Spain particularly in the mountainous region of Picos de Europa. We’ve upgraded all these Spanish sites, and improved them considerably from their original three-star rating. We believe our holidays offer superb facilities for the whole family. Parents who want their children to be fully occupied for all or part of the day can take advantage of our children’s activities. These are organised by our well-qualified and enthusiastic staff. Each day kicks off with a sports match perhaps football, or volleyball, followed by an hour of drama for everyone. This may include singing or dancing, mime or other activities. In the afternoon, there’s a different art activity for each day of the week including a poster competition or model making What’s more, our sites are truly child-friendly and, with this in mind we operate a no-noise rule in the evenings Children’s evening activities usually finish at 9.30 or occasionally 10, and from 10.30 holiday-makers are expected to be quiet in the areas where there are tents. We want nothing to go wrong on a PS Camping holiday, but if it does, we also want all customers to be insured. If you haven’t organised an annual insurance policy of your own you’ll need to take out the low-cost cover we offer and we require that you arrange this when you make your holiday reservation. There are many advantages to choosing PS Camping, and to recommending it to others. As a regular customer you’ll be kept informed of special offers and your friends can benefit from ten per cent off their holiday or book a luxury tent for the price of a standard one. In return, we'll send you a thank-you present, which you can choose from a list of high-quality items.

Good morning I'm very pleased to have been invited along to your club to talk about our Charity Sponsored Walking Holiday for Education Aid. I'll start by giving you a brief overview of what it entails. First of all let me explain what we mean by 'sponsored' here. This is where people promise to donate money to the charity if you achieve your goal in this case to walk a certain number of miles. Basically we are organizing a ten-day holiday, from the sixth to the sixteenth of November with eight days actual walking, trekking in the Semira Mountains. Let's have a look at some of the details. We require you to raise sponsorship money of at least $3,200 paying $250 of it up front as a deposit and the rest in stages throughout the year Out of this, about 35% will go on your expenses and that leaves 65% guaranteed to go to the charity. Which brings me to the most important part. This trek is being specifically organized to help education in the Semira region. Last year we helped train teachers for the disabled, and this year we're focusing on the pupils Each of the walkers' sponsorship money will go to help an individual special needs pupil in one of the mountain schools. In the second part of the talk I'll be giving you a lot more details, but back to the basic information. Age limits This is the second time we have run this kind of holiday and um, on the first we even had an eighty-year old But we found it was wise to establish limits this time You have to be at least eighteen and the top limit is now seventy though you need to obtain a health certificate from your doctor if you are over sixty years old. Now, the Semira Mountains are among the highest in the world but you mustn't be too daunted we will mainly be trekking in the foothills only, although there will be spectacular views even in the foothills. However, you will need to be extremely fit if you aren't now and you're interested in coming with us You have plenty of time to get into shape You will be sleeping in tents so you must have quite a bit of equipment with you but you will be helped by local assistants. Your bedding and so forth will be carried by them. We ask that you only walk with a small rucksack with needs for the day. I don't think I've really said enough about the marvellous area you'll be walking in Let's have a look at some of the sights you'll be seeing. Apart from these spectacular snow-covered peaks and valleys, there are marvellous historic villages. the area has been famous for centuries for making beautiful carpets although recently there has been a trend to move into weaving blankets and wood carving. The people are extremely friendly and welcoming. We deliberately keep the parties small in size to minimize disruption to people and landscape.

Welcome to all of you . . . can everybody see and hear me? . . . Good . . . . I'm Sally, your guide for this tour of the Bicentennial Park I hope that you're all wearing your most comfortable shoes and that you can keep up the pace. So let's get under way on our tour around this wonderful park. I'll start today with some general background information. There used to be a lot of factories in this area until the 1960s. Creating the park required the demolition of lots of derelict buildings on the site so most of the exciting park space all around you was originally warehouses and storehouses. The idea of building a public park here was first discussed when a property developer proposed a high-rise housing development, but the local community wasn't happy. If the land was to be cleaned up they wanted to use the site for recreation. Residents wanted open space for outdoor activities rather than housing or even an indoor sports complex. Now to the Bicentennial Park itself. It has two areas, a nature reserve and a formal park with man-made features and gardens. The tall blue-and-white building in front of us is called The Tower and is the centre point for the formal gardens. It stands twelve metres high so follow me up the stairs to where we can take advantage of the fantastic views. well here we are at the top of The Tower, and we're going to look at the view from each direction. Out to the east, the large buildings about a kilometre away are on the Olympic site. There's an indoor arena for gymnastics, a stadium for track and field and a swimming pool for races and synchronised swimming and also diving. If you look carefully down there, you can see the train lines. The Olympic site has its own station to encourage the use of public transport. There is also a car park, but it only holds a limited number of cars. The formal park has some specially-created water features. If you look out here to the south you can see a circular ornamental pond. And around to the west, you can relax and sit on a bench to smell the flowers in the rose garden and finally up to the north, if you look in front of you now there's a lake with a small island in the centre you can hire rowing boats at the boat shed which you can't see from here but if you look through the trees, you can see the café, which has lovely views across the water. Okay, let's climb down now

Welcome to Green Vale Agricultural Park As you know, we have only been open a week so you are amongst our first visitors. We have lots of fascinating indoor and outdoor exhibits on our huge complex, spreading hundreds of hectares. Our remit is to give educational opportunities to the wider public as well as to offer research sites for a wide variety of agriculturists and other scientists. Let's start by seeing what there is to do. As you can see here on our giant wall plan, we are now situated in the Reception block ... here. As you walk out of the main door into the park there is a path you can follow. If you follow this route you will immediately come into the Rare Breeds section where we keep a wide variety of animals which I shall be telling you a little more about later. Next to this ... moving east... is the large grazing area for the rare breeds. Then further east... in the largest section of our Park is the Forest Area. South of the grazing area and in fact just next to the Reception block is our Experimental Crop Area. In the middle of the Park ... this circular area is our lake These two small rectangular shapes here are the Fish Farms where we rear fish for sale. To the east of those is the marsh area which attracts a great many migrant birds. In the south-eastern corner, beyond the marsh, is our Market Garden area, growing vegetables and flowers. All these areas can be visited by the general public for almost all the year... although please take note of the large signs at the entrance to each area which tell which tell you when certain areas are being used for particular controlled experiments and are therefore temporarily out of bounds to the public. You can see for yourself what a huge area the park covers and a key question is always, how can we move around? Well you have a choice of means all environmentally friendly Cars are banned in the park. We have bicycles which you can hire behind the reception block here the healthy ones of you can go on foot and finally there's our electric tram, powered from solar cells. You find more information about this at the front entrance. A good place to start on your tour is the Rare Breeds section. We keep goats, sheep and hens and other kinds of poultry. We are also thinking of bringing in cows and horses but we do not, as yet, have facilities for these bigger animals. The animals are fed in public twice a day and a short lecture given on their feeding habits and nutritional needs. These are very popular with the public but of course we mustn't lose sight of the main purpose of having this section not as such to preserve rare animals but to maintain the diversity of breeds to broaden the gene pool for agricultural development.

Hello I'm delighted to welcome you to our Wildlife Club and very pleased that you're interested in the countryside and the plants and creatures of this area. I think you'll be surprised at the variety we have here, even though we're not far from London. I'll start by telling you about some of the parks and open spaces nearby. One very pleasant place is Halland Common. This has been public land for hundreds of years and what you'll find interesting is that the River Ouse which flows into the sea eighty kilometres away has its source in the Common. There's an information board about the plants and animals you can see here and by the way, the Common is accessible 24 hours a day. Then there's Holt Island which is noted for its great range of trees. In the past willows were grown here commercially for basket-making and this ancient craft has recently been reintroduced The island is only open to the public from Friday to Sunday, because it's quite small and if there were people around every day much of the wildlife would keep away. From there it's just a short walk across the bridge to Longfield Country Park Longfield has a modern replica of a farm from over two thousand years ago Children's activities are often arranged there like bread-making and face-painting. The park is only open during daylight hours so bear that in mind if you decide to go there. Longfield Park has a programme of activities throughout the year and to give you a sample this is what's happening in the next few days

On Monday you can learn about herbs and how they've been used over the centuries. You'll start with a tour of our herb garden, practise the technique of using them as colour dyes for cloth and listen to an illustrated talk about their use in cooking and medicine. Then on Wednesday you can join local experts to discover the variety of insects and birds that appear in the evening. We keep to a small number of people in the group so if you want to go you'll need to phone the park ranger a few days ahead. There's a small charge which you should pay when you turn up. I'm sure you're all keen to help with the practical task of looking after the park so on Saturday you can join a working party. You'll have a choice of all sorts of activities from planting hedges to picking up litter so you'll be able to change from one to another when you feel like it The rangers will be hard at work all day, but do come and join in, even for just a short while. One thing, though, is to make sure you're wearing something that you don't mind getting dirty or torn.

1. One very pleasant place is Halland Common. This has been public land for hundreds of years.

2. In the past willows were grown here commercially for basket-making, and this ancient craft has recently been reintroduced.
   (Trước đây, những cây liễu được trồng ở đây để lấy nguyên liệu đan giỏ, và nghề cổ truyền này đã mới đây đang được giới thiệu lại.)
3. On Monday you can learn about herbs, and how they've been used over the centuries. You'll start with a tour of our herb garden, practise the technique of using them as colour dyes for cloth, and listen to an illustrated talk about their use in cooking and medicine.

(Chúng tôi duy trì số lượng người nhỏ trong nhóm, vì vậy nếu bạn muốn đi, bạn sẽ cần gọi điện cho những người bảo vệ công viên vài ngày trước đó. Bạn sẽ cần trả một ít tiền khi bạn đến.)

5. One thing, though, is to make sure you're wearing something that you don't mind getting dirty or torn.
   (Tuy nhiên, bạn cần chắc chắn rằng bạn đang mặc bộ quần áo mà bạn không phải lo nó sẽ bị bẩn hay rách.)

Good morning I'm very pleased to have this opportunity to say a little about two exciting new developments in the city the Brackenside Open-Air Swimming Pool and the children's Adventure Playground in Central Park. As many of you may know, the idea for these initiatives came from you the public Consultation exercise with the city council conducted last year And they have been realised using money from the SWRDC the South West Regional Development Commission. First of all, Brackenside Pool As many of the older members of the audience will remember there used to be a wonderful open-air pool on the sea front 30 years ago but it had to close when it was judged to be unsafe. For the design of this new heated pool we were very happy to secure the talents of internationally renowned architect Ellen Wendon who has managed to combine a charming 1930s design which fits in so well with many of the other buildings in the area with up-to-the-minute features such as a recycling system the only one of its kind in the world which enables seawater to be used in the pool. Now, there has been quite a bit of discussion in the local press about whether there would be enough room for the number of visitors we're hoping to attract but the design is deceptive and there have been rigorous checks about capacity. Also, just in case you were wondering, we're on schedule for a June 15th opening date and well within budget a testimony to the excellent work of local contractors Hickman's. We hope that as many people as possible will be there on June 15th. We have engaged award-winning actress Coral White to declare the pool open and there'll be drinks and snacks available at the pool side. There'll also be a competition for the public to decide on the sculpture we plan to have at the entrance you will decide which famous historical figure from the city we should have. and now moving on to the Central Park Playground which we're pleased to announce has just won the Douglas Award for safety the news came through only last week. The unique design is based on the concept of the Global Village with the playground being divided into six areas showing different parts of the world each with a representative feature. For example, there is a section on Asia and this is represented by rides and equipment in the shape of snakes orang-utans, tigers and so on fauna native to the forests of the region.

   (Về thiết kế của bể nước nóng mới này, chúng tôi rất hài lòng khi được yên tâm về tài năng của kiến trúc sư Ellen Wendon nổi tiếng khắp thế giới, người mà đã thành công trong việc kết hợp thiết kế của những năm 1930 đầy quyến rũ để hài hòa với nhiều tòa nhà khác trong vùng.)
3. Now, there has been quite a bit of discussion in the local press about whether there would be enough room for the number of visitors we're hoping to attract, but the design is deceptive and there have been rigorous checks about capacity.
   (Bây giờ, mọi người đang thảo luận xem liệu có đủ chỗ cho số lượng khách du lịch mà chúng ta hy vọng sẽ thu hút được hay không, nhưng thiết kế thì chưa được đảm bảo và ở đó đã có những cuộc khảo sát nghiêm khắc về sức chứa của khu vực đó.)
4. There'll also be a competition for the public to decide on the sculpture we plan to have at the entrance: you will decide which famous historical figure from the city we should have.
   (Sẽ có một cuộc thi cho quần chúng để quyết định xem tác phẩm điêu khắc nào nên được đặt ở lối vào, cụ thể là bạn sẽ chọn xem nhân vật lịch sử nổi tiếng nào của thành phố mà chúng ta nên chọn.)
5. And now, moving on to the Central Park Playground, which we're pleased to announce has just won the Douglas Award for safety.
   (Và bây giờ, chúng tôi vui mừng khi thông báo rằng Sân chơi Công viên Trung tâm vừa mới chiến thắng Giải thưởng Douglas cho sự an toàn.)

First of all let me thank you all for coming to this public meeting to discuss the future of our town. Our first speaker is Shona Ferguson from Barford town council. Shona. Thank you. First I'll briefly give you some background information then I'll be asking you for your comments on developments in the town. Well, as you don't need me to tell you, Barford has changed a great deal in the last 50 years. These are some of the main changes. Fifty years ago, buses linked virtually every part of the town and the neighbouring towns and villages. Most people used them frequently but not now because the bus companies concentrate on just the routes that attract most passengers So parts of the town are no longer served by buses Even replacing old uncomfortable buses with smart new ones has had little impact on passenger numbers It's sometimes said that bus fares are too high but in relation to average incomes fares are not much higher than they were 50 years ago. Changes in the road network are affecting the town. The centre was recently closed to traffic on a trial basis making it much safer for pedestrians The impact of this is being measured. The new cycle paths, separating bikes from cars in most main roads, are being used far more than was expected reducing traffic and improving air quality And although the council's attempts to have a bypass constructed have failed we haven't given up hope of persuading the government to change its mind. Shopping in the town centre has changed over the years. Many of us can remember when the town was crowded with people going shopping. Numbers have been falling for several years. Despite efforts to attract shoppers for instance by opening new car parks Some people combine shopping with visits to the town's restaurants and cafés. Most shops are small independent stores, which is good but many people prefer to use supermarkets and department stores in nearby large towns as there are so few well-known chain stores here. Turning now to medical facilities the town is served by family doctors in several medical practices fewer than 50 years ago but each catering for far more patients Our hospital closed 15 years ago which means journeys to other towns are unavoidable. On the other hand, there are more dentists than there used to be. Employment patterns have changed, along with almost everything else. The number of schools and colleges has increased, making that the main employment sector Services, such as website design and accountancy have grown in importance and surprisingly perhaps manufacturing hasn't seen the decline that has affected it in other parts of the country.
